The sheling, which killed or wounded about ten peasant fugees in a nearby pagoda, occurred three months ago. but as been kept secret by the Cambodian government, the TITCES said .....

The huge temple is Cambodia's national symbol. It was becupied by Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops last june, after the war spread across Cambodia, but government rces were ordered not to-attack it.

<sup>3</sup>. The barrage; fired by a 105-mm howitzer battery, hit the buth side of the main temple, destroying the third floor hi the southern gate, the sources said. One shell smashed to the second-floor gallery and three more exploded in he gallery of history on the first floor, damaging from top 's bottom the fresco depicting the story of the Khmer Empire.

- Largest Edifice in Complex

Angkor Wat is the largest single edifice in the vast ingkor. complex, covering nearly a square mile including its roat and vast courtyards.

Built in the 12th century by the Khmer King Survavarvan II, and abandoned in the 15th century, it is thought by ome archaeological scholars to have been a tomb as well as : temple. The history of the Khmer Empire is depicted in is carved stone frescoes, considered among the world's outtanding examples of bas-relief art.

Informed sources said the artillery barrage was ordered y a battery commander without permission from higher uthority.

The sources said the officer, a captain, was transferred o another unit outside the Siem Reap area but was not unished, apparently because the high command believed that unishing him would damage morale in the army.

Nine Soviet Jews went on trial in Lenmgrad today charged with organized anti-Soviet activity. Tass said eight of them were accomplices of the 12 would-be hijackers convicted of treason last December.

Reliable Jewish sources said that entry to the Leningrad city court for the long-delayed trial was restricted to those with special passes. Only close relatives of the accused were permitted to attend. The rest of the hundred seats were assigned to people believed to be hostile to the defendants, the sources said.

No foreign correspondents were allowed to attend and Soviet media have so far ignored the trial. But Tass, the official press agency, in a dispatch for foreign subscribers, said the indictment read in court today charges that all nine "entered into a criminal conspiracy and committed a number of punishable criminal of-

Activity Lighter, Mark Declines In Foreign Exchange Markets

-* Europe's foreign exchange millkets experienced light activity yesterday as traders apparently awaited a trend on new currency values.

Both the floating deutsche mark and the revalued Swiss franc declined slightly, the mark showing an effective revaluation of 3 percent above its old par value, down from Monday's close.

Mike Mansfield, citing "a full-blown monetary crisis" stemming from dollar troubles, moved today for quick action on his bill to cut in half U.S. troop strength in Europe.

The Montana Democrat, for years an advocate of sharp cuts in the U.S. NATO commitment, introduced his bill today as a rider to the draft-extension legislation now before the Senate. The Mansfield provision would cut U.S. troop strength in Europe from 300.000 to 150.000. Sen. Sen. Gordon Allott. of Colorado, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, announced that the Nixon administration opposed the Mansfield bill, but that a GOP substitute might be offered that would call on the administration to work for a substantial reduction of forces. Later today. Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R., Md., offered a substitute for the Mansfield amendment which would support President Nixon's "declared intention... to maintain the necessary level of U.S. armed forces in Europe." The Mathias measure also provides that "significant changes" in the level of U.S. forces in Europe would not be made without "full consultation" with Congress.

Claim Votes to Win; Showdown Due Today

By Richard L. Lyons

WASHINGTON, May 11 (WP) -House supporters of the supersonic transport plane claimed today that they had the votes to revive it, but the vote was put off until tomorrow.

The reason for the delay, said Republican leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, was that by the time the House reached the point in its appropriation-bill debate to vote on the SST it was 5 pm. and ten to 15 SST votes had left town for evening commitments.

If the assessment of the SST backers was correct, the overnight delay could give their opponents time to regroup, call back absentees and distribute their anti-SST literature.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, of Montana, said he expected the Senate would again vote to kill the project even if the House voted to continue it. The Senate has voted against it twice in the last five months.

The program to develop a faster-than-sound commercial plane appeared dead in March when both House and Senate voted to end federal aid which has totaled nearly $900 million

Britain and Lockheed Sign Conditional TriStar Contract

LONDON, May 11 (AP).-The Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and Rolls-Royce today signed a conditional contract by which the British company will supply RE-211 engines for the U.S. com-Dany's TriStar airbus.

The conditions of the contract were not officially revealed. But two known conditions are that the U.S. Congress must vote $250 million to back Lockheed and that the state-owned British European Airways must buy the airbus for its routes.

Yesterday, British Minister Lord Carrington and Aerospace Minister Fredrick Corfield talked in terms of 555 engines, saying

After 8 Years

The plane, being built by the Boeing Co. in Seattle, was scheduled to fly in two years. But Congress, after voting funds for eight years, bowed to protest against noise, possible harm to the environment and distorted national priorities and voted to end federal aid.

But the 215-to-204 House vote against the SST meant that a shift of six votes or a large number of absentees could turn it around now.

Rep. Ford said the outlook for reviving the project, which is strongly supported by the administration and leaders of both parties in the House, is "encouthis number would cost about $192 million to produce, with Britain paying and Lockheed underwriting $120 million of the amount. Earlier, Lockheed's chairman, Daniel Haughton, had talks with the British Defense Ministry on the project. He attended as an observer the meetings between Rolls - Royce executives and representatives of four airlines scheduled to buy the TriStar-Trans World, Delta, Eastern and Air Canada.

Vows to Complete Deal

At the meeting, the nationalized Rolls-Royce (1971) Ltd. assured the airlines it was able to carry the RB-211 project through to its conclusion and give it long-term support afterwards. Today's signing of the conditional contract marked a major advance from the chaos caused when Rolls-Royce collapsed in February. The engineering company found that coaring development costs had made it impossible to continue the RB-211 project on the original contract prices. The jobs of tens of thousands of aircraft workers in the United States and in Britain depend on a satisfactory outcome. Major defense matters on both sides of the Atlantic are also involved. The British Conservative government, a confirmed opponent of nationalizing private companies, was forced to take over the aircraft engine division of Rolls-Royce at the time of the crash, Mr. Haughton said today he did not know when the TriStar problem would be finally overcome but that he hoped it would be soon. The system of uniform farm prices and free trade in farm products among the six countries is fundamental to the Common Market. More than 90 percent of its spending is on agriculture. The French and Dutch can be counted on to defend the system, since their farmers benefit most. Before the floating of the mark and the guilder on Sunday, the currencies of all member states were permitted to vary no more than 0.75 percent above or below a fixed value in dollars. Uniform farm prices were set on this basis. Now the farm price system is out of kilter.

SAIGON, May, 11 (AP).--A high-ranking defector from North Vietnam said today that American prisoners of war are subjected to "brutal interrogation" by the North Vietnamese and arc intensively exploited for strategic and propaganda purposes.

Dr. Dang Tan, a former medical officer and political commissar in the North Vietnamese forces, said at a governmentsponsored news conference that the Communists "usually put the prisoners on parade through the streets of Hanoi and other cities" in North Vietnam.

He said that he had. "many opportunities" to meet U.S. prisoners in North Vietnam, which he left four years ago. He said that he had conversations with them, but "we never discussed politics" because Security Ministry men were present at the meetings.

Under questioning by newsmen, Dr. Tan conceded that the last time he saw Americans in North Vietnain was in May, 1967, before he infiltrated into South Vietnam. He said, however, that he met some American prisoners later in South Vietnam when they were about to be transferred to the North. "I am concerned that the people and the government of the United States will be completely misled by their hopes that the American POWs will be permitted to return to their homeland." # Ex-GI Refuses to Name Men In Alleged Vietnam Massacre

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, May 11 (WP). -Danny Notley, an ex-Army sergeant who claims that he witnessed another U.S. massacre of Vietnamese civilians at a village not far from My Lai, called yesterday for President Nixon to set up a special citizens' commission to investigate the fighting tactics that he says make such atrocities inevitable.

At a New York press conference, Mr. Notley, 23, also said that if the President did not act on his suggestion within ten days, he would seek a personal audience with Mr. Nixon to try to convince him of the need for such a commission.

Mr. Notley first made his disclosures about the alleged massacre on April 38 before an unofficial congressional hearing on U.S. war crimes.

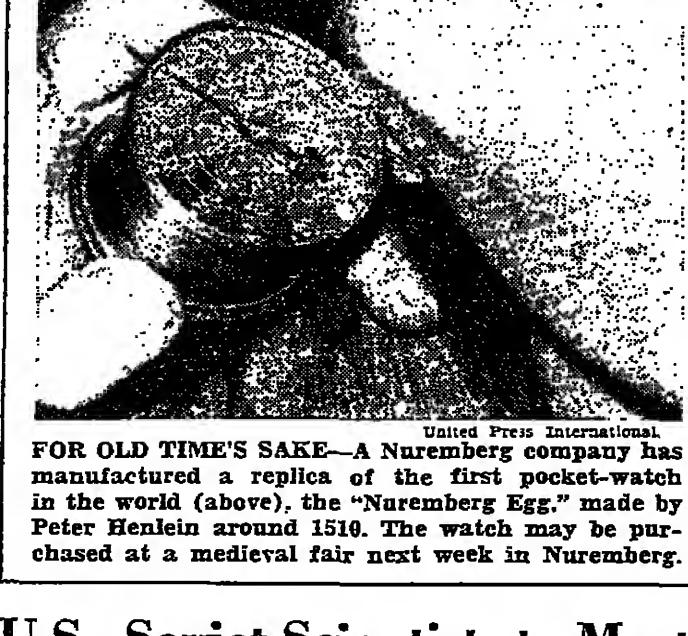

The former GI, however, has thus far refused to name any of the other men in his rifle squad who took part in the incident, claiming that prosecution of soldiers is drawing attention away from the civilian and military higher-ups who created what he views as controversial strategles.

would make the administration shift its focus to institutional decisions and policies and away from the concept that the lowranking military personnel are responsible" for the alleged massacres.

Mr. Notley and Mr. Ensign both say that they believe that such tactics as "search and destroy missions, free-fire zones and reconnaissance by fire." plus the demand for body counts and the type of training given GIs, "which dehumanizes both them and the Vietnamese," are the real culprits.

'Scapegoating GIs'

Mr. Ensign believes that the recent guilty verdict against 1st Lt. William L. Calley jr. is symptomatic of the government's "propensity for scapegoating GIs in response to public concern over massacres like My Lai. Lt. Calley tends to deflect the public off the policies designed at the highest levels and onto low-ranking individuals," Mr. Ensign said. The New York attorney also said that, if the President ap-

Silence Blamed

The Army claims that Mr. Notley's unwillingness to provide the names of other men who can be questioned has hampered their own investigation.

Mr. Notley's lawyer, Thomas D. Ensign, 30, who accompanied the veteran yesterday, explained in an interview that Mr. Notley was not trying to play "confrontation politics" with the President but wanted to make a personal statement based on his own experiences and convictions that

The Canadian proposal accepted by the conference today called only for one informal meeting with scientists to discuss seismological means of verifying an underground test ban. Conference spokesmen said. however, there could well be further such meetings during the summer session.

Turner, 58, was scattenced by U.S. District Court Judge Oren R. Lewis. Execution of sentence was postponed one week.

Turner had pleaded guilty April 9 to the charge. At the time, eight other charges involving firearms violations were dropped. He still must face trial June 7 on four counts of income-tax evarion.

Turner could have received a neximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine on the firearms charge. Each of the tax charges against him carries the sence maximum penalty.

Engineers at the Cape Kennedy spaceport said they think a minor electrical problem upset the pitch control of the second-stage Centaur rocket, causing the Mariner to drop into the south Atlantic Ocean.

Mariner-9, now scheduled to be the first spacecraft to orbit Mars. can be launched as late as June 3 and still carry out its full mission.

"If necessary, we'll delay that long," said Dr. Fletcher, a physicist who was president of the University of Utah before becoming NASA administrator. He termed the $77 million Mar-

Not Like Manned Flights

He acknowledged that NASA does not take the same pains with its unmanned launches as it does with its manned space flights. Spacecraft for manned flights include intensive backup systems to take over if the primary system fails. In addition, prelaunch checks for manned flights are far more extensive than for unmanned.

Sean Lemass, 71, Ex-Premier Of Ireland, De Valera Aide

DUBLIN. May 11 (AP).—Sean Lemass, 71. the "boy hero" of the 1916 Easter Rebellion who became prime minister of the Irish Republic, died early today in a nursing home.

Mr. Lemass succeeded his political mentor, Eamon de Valera, as prime minister of the republic and served from 1957 to 1966. He had suffered a lung ailment for several weeks.

Mr. Lemass. like most senior politicians of the Irish Republic. graduated to the debating chambers of government from the battlefield. He was still a schoolboy when he joined the Irish Republican Army to fight British occupation forces.

At 16. 25 a young IRA recruit who lied about his age in order to join the fighting. Mr. Lemass was a member of the small garrison which held out for a week under constant British bombardment in Dublin's General Post Office in 1916.

He was captured at the slege's end but released by British officers after a week. They thought him merely an adventurous schoolboy.

bld for entry is under consideration in Brussels. In a personal tribute today, President de Valera, 88, sald he had lost "a dear friend and a most loyal comrade," with the death of Mr. Lemass.

Officials today reasserted the government's determination not to mediate the dispute. The handsof attitude reflected the government's fears that trade unions in other nationalized industries might unlearh strikes for higher wages in the hope that the government would ultimately step in as an arbiter and win them concessions.

Renault officials said that the firm's daily output of 3,500 cars has come to a virtual standstill as a result of the ten-day strike by workers in a component parts branch factory at Le Mans, 120 miles southwest of Paris.

Lack of spare parts has led the Renault management to close down most of the assembly lines in France and at Haren. Belgium. The company has laid off temporarily about 60,000 out of its 96.000 employees.

A company spokesman said that, for the time being, export orders were being fully covered. Well-informed sources said that the government was anxious for the Renault strike to end soon. but without a general wage increase.

The Communist, Socialist and Catholic trade unions today called for a new. 72-bour walkout of the 8.000 officers of the French comniercial shipping fleet.

Strikes also were scheduled in the metal industry in the coming weeks.

Foreign Policy and the Draft

The current debate in the United States Senate over the extension of the conscription law proves very plainly that if the lawmakers are to assert their influence over foreign affairs, they had better find some very specific mechanisms through which to operate. The draft is not one of them.

Conscription and foreign policy are, of course, closely linked. The Vietnamese fighting has done more to harm the principle of selective service than all the ideological arguments against it, all the practical shortcomings of its administration. Whatever else might have been said about the war in Southeast Asia, it was not one that should have been fought by shortterm conscripts. Its nature demanded the services of professionals, specially trained for quasi-guerrilla warfare; its goals and origins were such that they could not enlist the enthusiasm of a mass army, drawn from the general population and affecting, in one way or another, every home. But those are also very good reasons why this particular war should not be linked (although several senators have done so) to a debate on conscription in general—a debate which is necessarily complex enough. And to bring in, as Sen. Mansfield has done, the question of American troop strength in Europe, is to compound confusion.

pulsory militia service is older than the Constitution. On the other side, there are numbers of Americans who believe that purely professional armed forces, on the scale that modern conditions demand, would be a danger to democracy. And a large, pragmatic segment holds that no volunteer force, however highly paid, would be adequate to defense needs.

There is enough material here for months of serious debate.' Sen. Stennis is close enough to Pentagon thinking so that his views cannot be taken without weighing his preconceptions. When he says: "To attempt to end the war by crippling or ending the draft would be a calamity for our national security," one's reactions are likely to depend on individual assessments of both the war and conscription.

Nevertheless, it is a fact that a proper military organization, intended for long-term

It seems clear that if Congress is to assert its authority over the use of the armed forces. either special legislation, clearly delimiting its intent, or the refusal of specific military appropriations, are the ways to approach the issue. Congress may want to affect foreign policy in a meaningful way; Congress has the constitutional power to do so. But it still has much to learn about the way to do the job.

Britain and Europe: Moment of Truth

At his request, Prime Minister Heath will be received by President Pompidou on May 20-21 at a summit expected to be decisive for Britain's third and probably last bid to join the Common Market: decisive, that is, for the future of the West. Ostensibly the issue is whether Britain can secure acceptable treatment for its imports or Commonwealth sugar and New Zealand dairy products and whether it can work out a formula on financing market agricultural policy, a formula sure to raise the British food bill. In actuality the issue is whether Britain can project itself as enough of a "European"-by starting to reduce both its special ties to the Commonwealth and its special relationship with the United States -to become acceptable to France, whose continuing thrust is to make Europe an ever more effective challenger of American influence on the Continent. That European countries trade so heavily with each other makes economic questions central in their relations. But the broad political question of how united Western Europe is to be and what will be its relationship to outsiders. especially to the United States, is the heart of the matter all the same. For Mr. Heath the drama of the May 20 summit can scarcely be exaggerated. Personally and politically, he has committed himself to bringing Britain into Europe, contending that the move would revive and invigorate not only his country's economy but its spirit as well. Yet his own restive public is aware that the two previous British applications were vetoed, anxious about the economic adjustments that will be required. and skeptical about the deepening political association with the Continentals that almost certainly will be involved. The imperiousness of General de Gaulle's personal style made it convenient for many Britons to make him the villain of their earlier failure to gain membership in the Market. But the fact is, Britain is an Island, and the island mentality dies hard; the British have themselves to blame, as well, for the collapse of previous efforts to negotiate their way in. The French or, if you will, the Gaullists -the difference is hard to perceive-are proving hard bargainers. Previously they stressed the economic hurdles to British entry. Now they are raising political ones: Will Britain support the unanimity rule the French favor in Market decision-making? Will Britain stop allowing its currency to be used to protect the dollar? The Pompidou government (and the Pompidou bureaucracy) see an American challenge everywhere, especially in such things as Eurodollars and the American-controlled multinational corporations, and it seems far from convinced that Britain has the sense. or the independence, to perceive a similar threat.

A Europe which included Britain (and coapplicants Ireland, Denmark and Norway) would be more cohesive but more competitive, more powerful but more independent and, of course, better able to play a role in international diplomacy and development. President Nixon has held the United States firmly in the position of welcoming an evolving Europe, without blinking at the challenges it will bring, and without butting in. This doesn't mean that the United States shouldn't express its thoughts about some of the ways in which an enlarged, and actively discriminatory, Common Market might work against the interests of the United States; it is only fair that our government has conveyed its reservations on this score. For the rest, however. as regards the manner in which a greater Europe is put together, that work is best done locally. By holding to the role of an interested bystander, this country will be better able to live with whatever decisions

The new international monetary crisis inevitably will affect Japan, too. In fact, a rush to buy Japanese yen on the London exchange market on Wednesday forced suspension of yen trading. The Tokyo foreign exchange market, too, saw a rush of dollar selling. The speculation in yen is quite different from that in the West German mark, because strict exchange controls are enforced in Japan. However, we must expect mounting external pressure for an upward revaluation of the yen as long as the dollar uncertainty continues. It is imperative that Japan and all the other advanced countries cooperate closely in order to overcome the latest international currency crisis -From Yomiuri Shimbun (Tokyo). Many have married Malagasy and have been assigned to long-range penetration jobs as sleepers.

Madagascar itself recognizes Taiwan's regime. Foreign Minister Rabemananjara told me: "We will not recognize Peking no matter what you Americans do. We don't want them messing around here. Their propaganda is hostile and they seek to foment trouble among our students."

Charles Trenet and New Plays

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS, May 11 (IHT).-Jean Cocteau put wings on Charles Trenet's shoulders in a drawing that has been reproduced in the Olympia program for the Trenet show. It was the tribute of one poet to another. Trenet, as the Cocteau sketch suggests, is the Ariel of popular melody. Every-thing be does is free of banality as it is free of vulgarity. Instead of playing down to his audience, he lifts it with him, be he in a West Los Angeles movie house, on television, in the ornate ballroom of a casino, in a nightclub or, as he happily is now, on stage.

More Changes Seen for System

NEW YORK (AP-DJ). - The international monetary system will likely be changed following the currency crisis in Europe, monetary experts say.

Among adjustments they see are: More freedom for exchange rates to fluctuale according to supply and demand. . Tighter controls on the movement of private capital from one country to another. • More vigorous international coordination to avert monetary crises. In the current circumstances, this could increase pressure on the United States to raise its interest rates and thus curb the flow of dollars seeking the higher yields often found abroad. Such changes would have great impact on U.S.

companies, which would find it harder to invest abroad. Neither businessmen closing a transaction nor tourists checking into a hotel would know exactly what they would have to pay in terms of dollars.

terest rates are still well below those abroad. Moreover, the U.S. money supply has been increasing at an exceptionally high 10.3 percent annual rate in the last four months, the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank calculates.

U.S. Position

It is not clear whether the Nixon administration will be willing to change its domestic economic policy because of the crisis.

The Treasury repeated its contention that the currency situation calls for "no immediate action" by the government, and Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew was not straying from White House policy when he said the government will not "put the U.S. economy through the wringer" to deal with "temporary" international situation.

U.S. interest rates are only temporarily lower than Europe's and this is because America is "further along the distuflationary road" than Europe. Paul W. McCracken of the President's Council of Economic Advisers (CEA) recently and officials are worried about recurrences. But even if the tensions generated by the current crisis prevent any prompt joint action, the trends toward increased exchange-rate flexibility and tighter controls on capital flows are likely to be pursued, analysis say. Differences over the best means of reform have caused intense debate. Some analysts contend the United States has ample room to deal with international dollar problems by tightening credit policy. To offset the negative economic impact of such a move, these analysts suggest cutting taxes or raising government spending. -- Economists note that sensitive short-term in-

"The whole episode shows how urgent it is to proceed with reforming' the fixed parity system, says Hendrik S. Houthakker, a CEA member.

To ease strains, he and others advocate such steps as legalizing temporary "transitional" floats of currencies. These would allow a nation to let the market help it set a new currency value. These officials also see merit in authorizing a "wider band" than the current 1 percent on either side of fixed parity to accommodate routine fluctuations. They also think nations should be encouraged to make smaller, more frequent changes in official exchange rates. This would minimize the traumatic crises that currently surround such changes, they contend.

At the same time, Paul W. Mc-Cracken, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said the rate of inflation is "clearly down."

Mr. McCracken's View Currently in Paris as leader of the U.S. delegation to the regular meeting of the economic policy committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, Mr. McCracken sajd U.S. retail prices rose only 2.8 percent in the first three months of 1971, compared with a 6 percent rise in the 1970 period.

While noting that the rate of increase in consumer prices "moderated somewhat" during the first quarter, the New York Fed said. "a clear trend toward a broad-based moderation of inflationary pressures has not yet emerged."

"Taken as a whole." the Fed's report said. "the performance of prices has continued to be ansatisfactory ... the implicit GNP price deflator (an index which measures price changes for all components of the gross national product) rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 5.2 percent in the first quarter of 1971, little changed from the performance of other recent quarters."

Electronics and instrumentation results showed some improvement. European operations made significant gains: revenues of $47 million were up $8 million. Notably. Solartron increased revenues and profits despite softness in the U.K. economy. In the United States, revenues were down slightly but earnings held even with 1969 as improvements in Weston-Newark compensated for the adverse im-

"The 1978 Annual Report, which will be ported to sharebulders on 28th May, 1871, will include the following consecuts in the Directors' Report-

HAWKER SIDDEL

Associated Companies To reflect the recent accounting practice statement issued by the Institute of Chartered Accountants, a change in accounting treatment has been made in the 1970 accounts to include the Group's share of the results and net assets of associated companies. This change in treatment has resulted in an increment of $905,000 in profit after tax. The comparative figures shown for 1969 have been adjusted throughout to reflect the same change of treatment, the corresponding increment for 1969 being $154,000 after tax.

its price in the face of world competition and the reliability of promises for its delivery.

Trading Results

The total Group net profit for 1970, after taxation and minority interests and after providing $0-5m in respect of Rolls-Royce amounts to $19.5m (1969: $20.0m). The proportion of this profit dealt with in the accounts of the parent company, Hawker Siddeley Group Limited, is $19.0m (1969; $15.8m).

Trading profits of the Group excluding Hawker Siddeley Canada amount to $40.8m (1969; $39-2m), which are split as follows :--

	1970	1969
	· $ m	$m
Aerospaca engineering	13-4	18.7
Electrical engineering	13.7	9-2
Mechanical engineering and Metals	13.7	11-3
	40-8	39-2

and after adjusting for interest, taxation and minority interests the net profit of the Group excluding Hawker Siddeley Canada amounts to $18-3m (1969: $19-5m).

The Group's share of the 1970 profit after tax of Hawker Siddeley. Canada is $1-2m (1969: $0-5m).

in arriving at the total Group net profit, provision has been made for losses which it is anticipated may arise as a result of the appointment of a Receiver for Rolls-Royce Limited. This provision is $0.5m after tax and minority interests.

Exceptional Items

A net credit of $0.7m is included in the profit and loss account as a separate item and does not form part of the trading result for 1970. This credit includes exchange profits reduced by a provision for costs of reorganization in the aerospace sector.

Financing

Bank loans, overdrafts and acceptance credits of the Group excluding Hawker Siddeley Canada amounted to $95-7m at 31st December, 1970 (1969: #94-3m). Credit balances of #29-8m at 31st December. 1989 were reduced to $2.9m at 31st December, 1970, due mainly to the purchase of Brook Motors Ltd. In September, 1970, the Company took advantage of an opportunity to raise funds in the Euro-dollar market, and issued US$16m 9% five year notes at a price of US $98%, which realised $14.4m after expenses.

Comments

The affairs of the Group as a whole ware dominated in 1970 by the effects of inflation, particularly in the U.K. As is well-known, heavy cost increases in wages, salaries and supplies occurred during the year-and continue to occur in 1971. Inflation gives rise to the problem not only of maintaining margins but also of containing the larger use of working capital due to the increased value of stocks and work in progress, Moreover industrial unrest leading to disruptionor the threat of it -- in the flow of essential components forces higher levels of stocking to ensure that production lines are kept going. Our managements had to face, and largely overcame, severe difficulties in 1970 from these causes, although the action taken was not wholly successful in protecting our margins. The rise in our exports to $216m (1969: $189m) suggests that despite these pressures we remained competitive overseas, but it seems unlikely that the economic climate that has existed in the U.K. in 1970 and early 1971 can continue without impact on external at ing, which depends not only on the quality of the product, but on

The aerospace industry throughout the western world encountered difficulties in 1970. Credit squeezes, a drop in passenger demand on airlines and adjustments of military demand affected the industry everywhere. Nevertheless, in the U.K. our aircraft activity had a high demand and good results, though the background position was reflected in a marked lowering of orders for the HS 125 executive aircraft. In Canada and in Australia there were problems, with the sharp reduction of demand for civil aircraft affecting de Havilland Aircraft of Canada, and a reduction of military work as well as of general aviation activities affecting Hawker de Havilland in Australia. Considerable changes have been made in these companies to meet the situation and these measures, together with a better market trend, should result in an improvement in 1971. 1970 was a year of relatively low procurement of guided missiles from Hawker Siddeley Dynamics and this contributed to a difficult year in which costs connected with the introduction of new products continued to have an effect on the results. This situation also is expected to move through to improvement in 1971.

The figures show useful progress in the electrical and mechanical sectors, where consolidation and re-adjustments after acquisitions in the late 1960's are having their effect. These sectors now comprise substantial businesses trading in widely based home and export markets, whose prospects are geared to the general state of trade and whose products are in areas where the underlying demand is likely to grow steadily. Although the electrical interests are now less dependent on purchases from central authorities, the low state of ordering during the year by the electrical supply authorities in the U.K. has inevitably had its influence. Demand in the mechanical area was heavy in 1970, outstripping the capacity available, though it fell away somewhat towards the year end.

Hawker Siddeley Canada made an increased contribution to the Group at $1.2m (1969: $0.5m).

The Group's outlook for 1971 is governed by two elements. The first is the unknown course that inflation and industrial problems will take in coming months. The second is that in some parts of the business which were specific areas of difficulty in 1970 there should be useful improvements as a result of better markets and adjustments of capacity. Additionally, on present evidence, there are likely to be still further improvements in several areas that did well in 1970, though these may be offset by the effects of the reductions in demand which are now showing in some of the mechanical and electrical areas. There are, therefore, reasons for expecting a batter year in 1971, subject to the uncertainties of the economic environment.

in electricity, gas, and water meters. The meter business is profitable and its growth is related to the economy and the standard of living.

We believed that the acquisition of Compteurs would contribute to future earnings of Schlumberger and would not dilute earnings per share in 1970. An acquisition of this size requires immediate and cf-fective action. Schlumberger has taken full responsibility for management, appointing Jérôme Seydoux President of Compteurs.

The acquisition was treated as a purchase and not as a pooling of interests. This means that all assets and liabilities of Compteurs had to be appraised at fair value at the date of acquisition. These opening valuations, together with certain adjustments, resulted in significant changes from previously recorded book amounts. In Europe the several electronic activities of Schlumberger and Compteurs have been regrouped into two operating units, one in industrial controls and the other in electronic instrumentation.

Initial results of Compteurs in 1970 were encouraging. For nine months, Compteurs' net earnings, after minority interest. were $3 million. Compteurs did not dilute Schlumbarger earnings per share. In fact, assuming full conversion of convertible debentures into Schlumberger common stock, the earnings of each Schlumberger share outstanding were increased $.03.

pact on EMR from cutbacks in military and industrial capital spending. The results also benefited from disposition of loss operations-Wichita, and Hatboro hydraulics in 1969 and Lexington in early 1970.

A softening in the European economy would temper our progress in 1971. However, Heath business has held up well and had a good start for 1971. Overall, our electronics results should show further modest improvements in 1971.

The oil business is receiving wide public attention throughout the world. Crises, fear, emotions sometimes obscure the economic reality.

In the U.S., oil exploration and drilling declined in 1970. Since World War II. domestic U.S. crude oil prices were higher than world prices and were protected through import quotas. Higher crude prices in oil exporting countries and higher tanker rates change the picture; today U.S. crude oil is competitive. Depletion of U.S. oil and gas reserves, easier money, and the constantly growing demand for oil products should induce oil companies and independents to step up U.S. exploration, both on land and offshore. It is not yet happening as the Alaskan pipe line and offshore lease sales are delayed. In the early months of 1971, the industry seems to be in a state of expectancy, A healthy oil business is essential for the U.S. and I am convinced that we will see a change in the public attitude and a more dynamic approach to exploration by oil operators

Outside the U.S., the search for oil resources has been increasing at a fast pace. It has not been a smooth and easy road. Nationalistic passions, civil disturbances, wars, have marked almost every year; 1970 was no exception. The Middle East crisis, the recent nationalization of foreign interests in Algeria, and the negotiations in Libya have made headlines. Yet the geographical distribution of our services in 70 countries has enabled us to show further significant improvement in 1970. Year after year oil companies' capital investment in development and exploration has increased regularly with occasional declines in some countries made up by greater activity elsewhere. The same pattern will continue.

Revenues from offield wireline services in the Eastern Hemisphere and South America rose 14% with a significant improvement in earnings.

A turnaround in U.S. oil exploration and the continuing pattern of expansion in the rest of the world should be beneficial to Schlumberger.

Benvenuti, happier after his loss than while he was training for the disaster, has always been a classy fighter. Even in his first bout with Monzon, he managed to last 12 rounds while reportedly out of shape.

Then Benvenuti lost to another Argentine, Jose Roberto Chirino. and it was evident it was time to bow out graciously. Benvenuti waited too long and didn't announce his retirement until last night, on Italian television. The damage had been done.

And that, alas, is nothing to laugh at.

Phil Esposito of the Bruins brought the Boston trophy collection to four when he accented the Art Ross Trophy for his explosive scoring-153 points on 76 goals and 76 assists.

The goaltending pair of Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure of the New York Rangers accepted the Vezina Trophy as the top netminders during the past Season.

Orr became only the second defenseman to win the Hart Trophy twice and tied a record with his fourth straight James Norris award.

MOSCOW, May 11 .-- The head of Moscow's taxi fleet said today that cards giving drivers' names would be installed in the passenger sections of all taxis.

The official, L. A. Yakovlev, told the newspaper Verchernyaya Moskva that riders would thus be able to report complaints. "but that is not the most important reason for installing the cards," he said. By Israel Shenker NEW YORK (NYT) .- "A great many New Yorkers feel that it's a compliment to be told. 'You don't talk like a New Yorker.'" said William Labov, a professor of linguistics who has been studying the local blight. "To talk like a New Yorker is usually considered 'sloppy,' 'careless' or 'distorted,' "-adjectives that he has gathered in interviews with New Yorkers.

Until recently, Prof. Labov taught at Columbia University. but he moved to the smoother sounds at the University of Pennsylvania, 90 miles away. "The average working - class Philadelphian doesn't see anything- wrong with Philadelphia speech," said Prof. Laboy, "but in New York City the average working-class person feels there's something wrong with the way he talks."

New York's verbal indignities are considered stigmatizing while excesses in other areas are glossed over or, indeed, found charming. Boston's "Pahk your car" and the Southern "y'all" are taken with pride, and even Philadelphis's confusion of "lure" and "lore" is taken in stride.

Folst Boid'

Not so for the "foist bold" of any season, which is shot down as authentically New York and interred as Brooklynese -- along with "dese," "dem" and "dose," Prof. Labov says that such "Brooklynese" is not really specific to the borough, but rather to the city's workers generallyand even they can pronounce "th" when they think it through, "The impression that there are people who always say 'dese' and 'dose' is ill-founded." he noted. "No native-born speaker would do it 100 percent of the time." Though "dese," "dem" and "dose" appear in no danger of becoming as dead as the dodo,

"foist" and "t'oid" are in peril. They are almost never used by younger people," said Prof. Labov. "Stigmatization has almost wiped them out."

The "R" after a vowel is an even more sensitive pointer to style and social position, he sugwas the exception. It was a gested, adding: "Most New Yorkers drop an 'R' sometimes, but as they rise on the social scale they drop fewer and fewer: there are people in New York City who never drop an 'R' now."

- Fourth Floor

To document social differences. Prof. Labov roamed the floors of Saks, Macy's and S. Kleinasking for the location of a deels. partment he knew was on the fourth floor.

Salespeople at Saks pronounced the "R" more than those at Macy's, who in turn were more "R"-pronouncing than employees at Klein's. At all three stores, floorwalkers pronounced the letter more often than the salespeople did and salespeople more often than stock boys. "At the beginning of the 19th century there were many cities in which English was 'R'-less," said the professor, "Boston, Richmond, New York and Charleston had English culture as their model, and the 'R' suffered as a result. One major city-Philadelphia-

The samba is entitled "Apesar backed government. de Voce" (Because of You), Written and sung by Chico Baurque The description reads: de Hollanda, it was No. 1 on the cate, clear, pink color, ( Brazilian hit parade, partly because of its catchy lyrics: "In nose, good body, relativel flnish, considerable char spite of you, tomorrow will be another day .... When the moand you're wrong. It's a d tion of a particular vintag ment comes, yes, I swear my suffering will be repaid, with incatalogue prepared for San cisco's National Auction of terest . . . How are you going to stop people from singing in your Wines.
